

Join the Journal of the International AIDS Society (JIAS) for a six-part webinar series on scientific writing and publishing between May and September 2021.

This interactive series will build skills in scientific writing and publishing and provide practical information to support new- and early-career HIV researchers. JIAS Editors will share their top tips for beginning the writing process, discuss the key components of a scientific manuscript and provide first-hand insights on the editorial processes and what editors look for. They will also discuss best practices and ethical issues in scientific writing and publishing. The series will include practical exercises, polls, opportunities for questions and answers and presentations from the diverse JIAS Editors.

Attendance is free of charge but registration is required.

Register here for the first five webinars by 07 May 2021 and stay tuned for registration information for the final webinar.

1. Why publish? Top tips before you start
20 May 2021 15:00 CEST
2. Writing your paper - Part I: Title and abstract
03 June 2021 15:00 CEST
3. Writing your paper - Part II: A section-by-section breakdown
17 June 2021 15:00 CEST
4. Getting published: Finding the right journal for your research
01 July 2021 15:00 CEST

5. Do's and Don'ts: Publishing ethics and best practices

15 July 2021 15:00 CEST

6. Secrets to success: Ask the JIAS Editors (live Q&A)

TBC

Please help us inform others of this capacity-building opportunity by sharing this invitation across your networks.

For inquiries or further information about the webinar, please contact workshops@jiasociety.org with the subject title, "JIAS six-part webinar series".

JIAS is an open access, peer-reviewed journal, which publishes HIV-related research from various disciplines and particularly encourages submissions in operational research and implementation sciences.